

Since enactment of the "Do Not Call" law, we feel our home is ours once again; sleep is not interrupted, meal time is peaceful, and we're not answering the phone to dead silence. It is not necessary for banks to call our homes to solicit business. Anyone needing bank services knows how to contact them. To change the law now would be a step backward.